Résumé: (traduction alternative)
A great tour that's worth the trip on its own. Combined with the superiore and the inferiore, it makes for a super-integral route with over 60 waterfalls.

Hydrologie: (traduction alternative)
Relatively small, but some rappellers are also very narrow.

Accès: (traduction alternative)
Same as Val Grande inferiore

Approche: (traduction alternative)
Same as Val Grande superiore, but just before the entry bridge, turn left and follow the zigzag path up to 1350m. From there, pass the small huts and cross the field to the entry point at 1310m.

Alternatively, you can also follow the trail up to 1,420 m and then descend along the stream to 1,310 m (probably not marked).

Tour: (traduction alternative)
Although it isn't the steepest canyon, it is very consistent. Right from the very first, very narrow rappel, you're put to the test to see if you've chosen the right water level. After that, there are a full 30 rappels and small jumps in a row all the way to the start of the SUP section.

Retour: (traduction alternative)
Either continue down the stream, or get out of the superiore at the entry bridge and head back down the same way.

I liked it a little better than the superiore. It was definitely a nice surprise, given how little information was available. (traduction alternative)
