Résumé: (traduction alternative) A total of 10 paragraphs.
Hydrologie: (traduction alternative) several ways out, some paths and trails lead through the canyon flows until early spring, then dry. must also flow again in summer after a few rainy days no tracks from floods Then visit the Canyon de la Sourde and finally the Canyon des Corralles to fill the day.
Accès: (traduction alternative) The most convenient parking lot, so as not to leave your car in sight, is just before the bridge over the Têt, at the level of the Fontpédrouse campsite. There are two other parking lots on the RN116 at the level of the bridge in the last big bends before Fontpédrouse. To get to the campsite, at the exit of Fontpédrouse, if you are coming from Prades, turn left towards Saint Thomas, then left again and cross the village. The start of the access path is just before the campsite on the right, following a pipe. The path goes through the campsite. Do not take the path to the right (fence), but continue straight ahead (path from Fontpédrouse to Thues via the Gorges de la Carança).
Approche: (traduction alternative) A few minutes after the campsite, leave the main path and take a path on the right to climb up to the beginning of the canyon of Carbonères. The path is difficult to find at first (cairn on a small wall). Follow it as best you can (cairn). Go over a large concrete slab (cairn at the right exit) and then under a ledge, continuing over cairns to the beginning of the canyon. At the beginning you can climb up to the right to reach the first two ledges.
Tour: (traduction alternative) If you climb up the first two steps, you come to a total of 10 ledges to conquer (the highest is 11 m high, but some follow one another with the same rappelling routes).

Retour: (traduction alternative)

The exit of the canyon is just before the Têt, where it crosses the path to Thues (yellow markings). Follow the Têt RD to the starting point of the parking lot.
