Résumé: (traduction alternative)
Alpine torrent with several very different parts. Of torrential character, if we descend it in spring, we will be able to enjoy a great descent where we will not lack anything. In summer we will be able to descend it but surely without water.
In the first part we will have long waterfalls and rappels, in an open environment, then there is an area with more difficult walking skills and, after the walkway, reach perhaps the most spectacular part with a small gorge and some really aesthetic embedded rappels.

Hydrologie:

Accès: (traduction alternative)
Take the N260 to Castejón de Sos, where we will turn off to Benasque on the A139. 54, where is the detour to Sahún, we enter the village and at the first detour we go to the right following the parking indicator, we will continue until the end of the village, where the parking is located.

Approche: (traduction alternative)
From the parking lot we follow the track that indicates the sign, this climb, in continuous ascent, reaches a right turn with another indicator that tells us to continue straight ahead following the course of the river. From here we will follow the white marks to go up the ravine to its headwaters. When we are at about 1600m altitude, we must be attentive that soon we will see the beginning of the ravine.

Tour: (traduction alternative)
A first part with long waterfalls and rappels, in an open environment, where the most remarkable is the tube of the 4th rappel, a place where the water gets stronger as the channel narrows, a place to walk very carefully. Then there is an area with more adventures, where we will have to walk more and after that, the walkway, which gives us access to perhaps the most spectacular part, with a small gorge and some really aesthetic rappels.

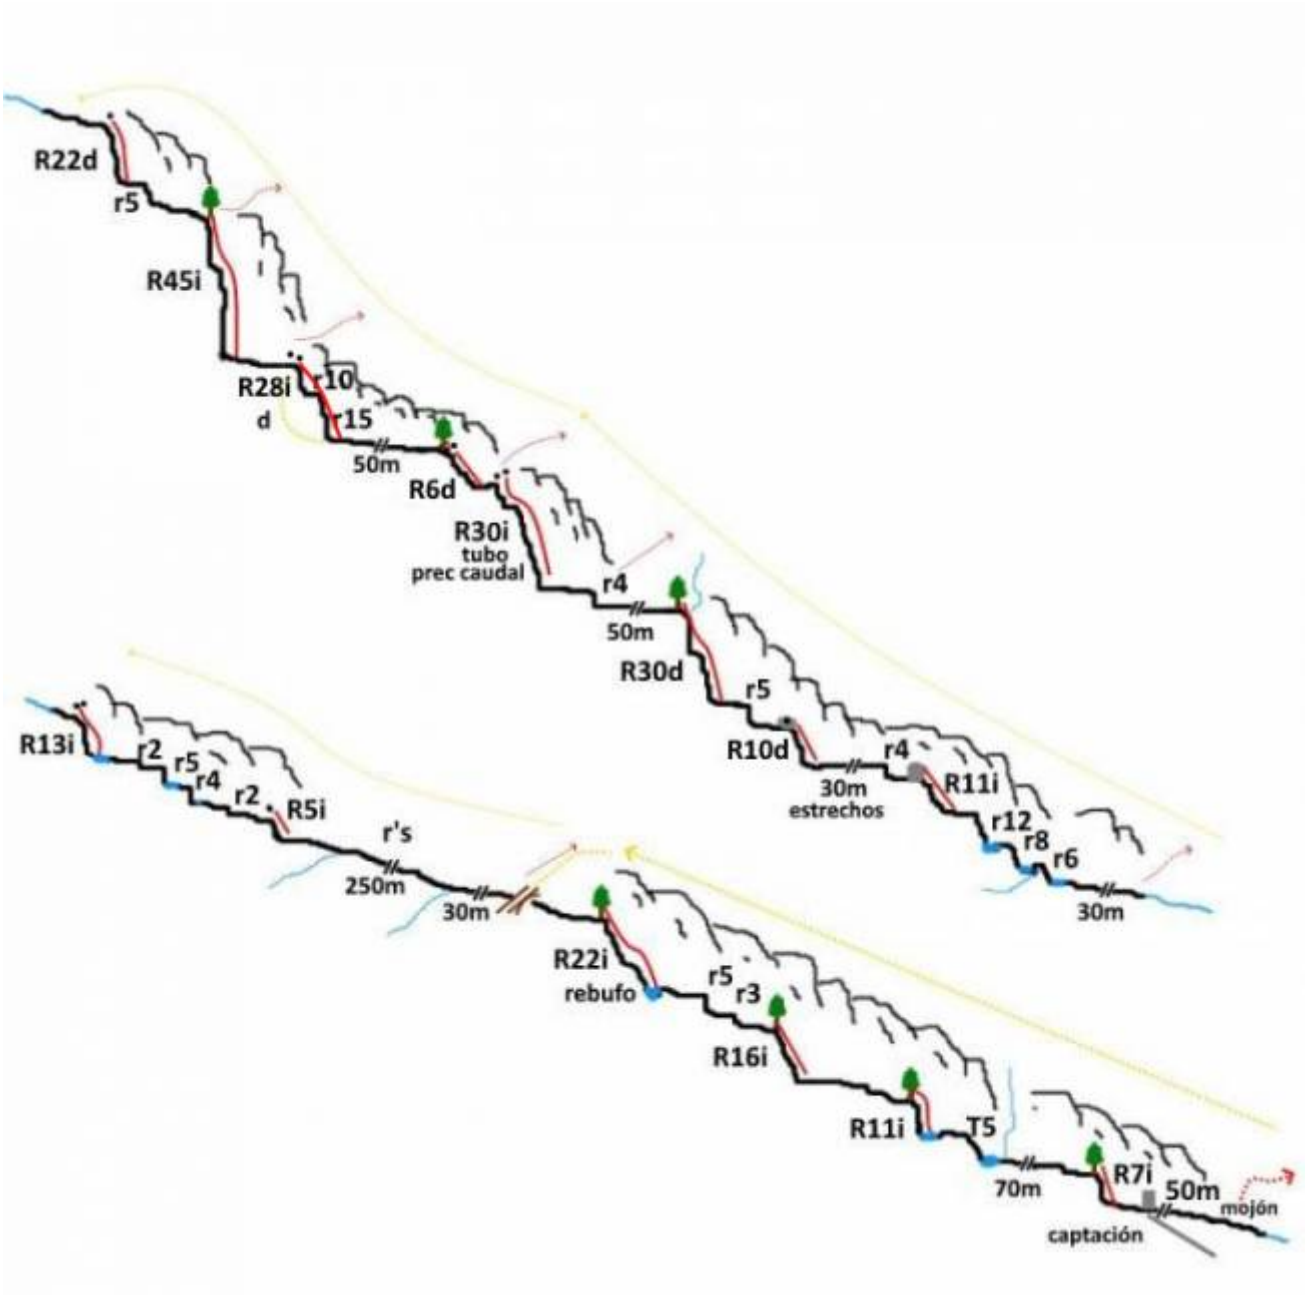

Retour: (traduction alternative)
After arriving at the catchment, shortly after, we will see a milestone and a small path on the left to take the access path. There are those who choose to follow it from the catchment (orographic right).
