Sintesi: (traduzione alternativa)

Rappel canyon with walking passages, mostly without water flow in the gorge area. Continuous water flow can be expected at the beginning of the year until around March/April.

Idrologia:

Accesso: (traduzione alternativa)

Shuttle displayed. One car down at Kaputas beach between Kas and Kalkan. The second car above Kalkan on road 07-53 towards Elmali. After 6.1 km from Kalkan, past a fountain on the right-hand side of the road, park your car in an open space at the side of the road and above the river.

For the transfer route (13.5 km) see <http://www.wikiloc.com/wikiloc/view.do?id=13938225>

Avvicinamento: (traduzione alternativa)

From the road, initially without a path down to the river, we come across a path running parallel to the slope. Follow this downhill above the river until it finally winds down into the river bed (near a pipeline that crosses the river here).

Giro: (traduzione alternativa)

First in the open riverbed, which usually still has water at the beginning. After just a few minutes, the water seeps into the ground and the descent continues - apart from a small but deep pool that can be climbed around - in the dry. Only after a walk of around 1.5 hours and a few passages for downclimbing do we come across the first compelling rappel. The canyon becomes more and more notchy and becomes more and more attractive.

There are 27 rappels to complete. They are listed in detail at <http://www.wikiloc.com/wikiloc/view.do?id=13937747>.

Ritorno: (traduzione alternativa)

After the attractive 27th and last rappel (27m), we walk a few minutes further, climb over the wall of a water drainage (under the road bridge) and come to Kaputas beach, which invites you to swim directly after the dry gorge. We then walk up the steps to the road and back to the car.

Automaticamente importato da Descente-Canyon.com per Canyon Kaputas For us very nice waterflow for a dry-canyon. Most abseils are out of the water, a few you have to abseil in the stream. We took a taxi for the shuttle. Price between 20-30 Euro bookable in Kalkan. The first part 45-60 min is boring hiking, with the 8th abseil it becomes nice. Great water level for a dry gorge. We even had to swim briefly once. Many places next to the water rappellable, few where you have to rappel in the stream. At the beginning 45 min - 1h stream walk. From the 8th rappel it gets great 📖. Cab for shuttle can be organized in Kalkan. Costs: between 20-30 euros. (traduzione alternativa)
