Sintesi: (traduzione alternativa)

There is probably no technical canyon in Pantalica.

Idrologia: (traduzione alternativa)

The character of the tour varies greatly depending on the water supply.

Accesso:

Avvicinamento: (traduzione alternativa)

The starting point is the parking lot at the eastern entrance to the Anapo Valley. At the entrance to the nature park you have to register in a book. The opening hours of the entrance vary depending on the season.

Follow the road along the old railroad line.

The first signposted possibility to leave the track leads towards the Ferla entrance. After a few meters you have to cross the Anapo. Continue uphill past the somewhat hidden Roman water pipe to the Ferla entrance (parking lot). From there, descend to the left in a large arc (on the way, a green gate blocks the descent to the interesting Grotta dei pipistrelli) down to Torrente Calcinara. This is where the actual trek begins.

Giro: (traduzione alternativa)

Depending on the time of year, this is the point to put on the neoprene. You now follow the watercourse through a number of pools and a few short, easy waterfalls. On the left you reach the beginning of the Bohemian aqueduct. There is a possible jump of 4m here. Opposite is a steep path that can be used as an emergency exit.

After 200 m you reach the Fiume Anapo. Now continue downstream until you can get out onto a path on the right. You can follow the Anapo further downstream. However, this quickly becomes tedious due to the slippery rock.

Ritorno: (traduzione alternativa)

Soon you reach the point where you crossed the Anapo during the ascent. Continue as on the access.
