Sintesi: (traduzione alternativa)
The east-facing, sunny, partly narrow canyon in a fantastic scenic landscape, demands the whole canyonist. The canyon is an absolute treat. About 35 rappelling points are feasible even at higher water levels.

Idrologia:

Accesso: (traduzione alternativa)
From the Inntal freeway exit Kramsach orographic right of the Brandenberger Ache to Aschau. A car can be parked directly at the exit at the last Wsf. (approx. 4 km after Kramsach or 150 m left after the signpost to the footpath to Tiefenbachklamm). With the second car follow the road to Aschau and from there continue on the tarred road until you come to a 4 x 5 m wooden shed on the left, where there are several signposts. Here a small road branches off to the right, leading steeply uphill to Wimmer and the Eil Alm. At the exit of the tarred road, before the prohibition sign, the car can be parked on the right.

Avvicinamento: (traduzione alternativa)
From here 150 hm to a fork, where the path branches off to the left. 50 meters later you cross the Tiefenbach ditch. Follow the path almost at the same level until the exit (cattle trough). Here, cross the stream, climb steeply for 10 m and then climb at the same level from tree to tree on a barely visible path until a large fallen maple tree lies to the right of the path, which is visible from here on. Follow the slightly ascending path, over a barbed wire fence, further to the first clear, water-bearing ditch, which - easier left - is descended to the Kreuzbach.

Giro: (traduzione alternativa)
The Wsf. quite at the exit, which initially walks wide, then right concentrated, can also be rappelled left over a tree.

Ritorno: (traduzione alternativa)
After the last waterfall orographic left 50 m to the car.

It took the six of us 4.5 hours. All anchors were there, most of them are 10mm single drill anchors. Had reception in several places in the canyon. Beautiful, very little-used tour with an impressive ambience! (traduzione alternativa)
