Sintesi: (traduzione alternativa)
Upper part of the Usedi, with many diagonal rappels and narrow crevasses. Proceed with caution; when water levels are high, this is a very long and strenuous route, as it involves an 800hm climb with no possible way out.

Idrologia: (traduzione alternativa)
It is best to wait a week after a big storm.

Accesso: (traduzione alternativa)
Pass Chironico and park at Grumo.

Avvicinamento: (traduzione alternativa)
Follow the hiking trail up to A Garnei and then take the only path that leads down into the valley. The trail is sometimes quite overgrown. At p. 1794 the path crosses a stream, which is the start of the tour.

Giro: (traduzione alternativa)
At the beginning there are many long slabs where you often have to look for the anchors. After that, the rappels become narrow, without the canyon being cut much. Later, a few tributaries from the right, and more and more a grandiose canyon.

Ritorno: (traduzione alternativa)
Orographically take the entry of the Inferiore on the right, or continue with inferiore to the road.

Completely renovated. Many anchors are loose. We have reinstalled or doubled up on 4 anchors, but many more anchors still need to be replaced. (traduzione alternativa)

Very beautiful but demanding tour. The first slab part is very long and we drilled a new anchor on the 65 meter rappel, around 15 meter before the end on the left side. The anchors throughout the whole canyon are in bad shape and need replacement. we got a lot of ropes stuck and it took us 9 hours to complete. The canyon is very beautiful and definitely worth it! Would go again!

Couldn't find an anchor at the very top, so the maximum rappelling route was 85 meters. Everything went well after that. No remaining snow. (traduzione alternativa)

Canyon still snow-covered with lots of névé. We'll probably have to wait at least another 2-3 weeks... Otherwise, the equipment is still in place. It's possible to bypass the very high abseils at the start by cutting through the forest. (traduzione alternativa)

We went in the day after a storm, and arrived at the start of the Inferiore pretty battered (bloody hands just from holding the ropes). Certainly more fun with less water. But otherwise a great experience. (traduzione alternativa)
